

TEAM REFLECTION W3

M/S STENA DANICA

This week we've completed the user stories, made a domain model of the project and started on a design model. Our user stories were a bit too large, so we broke them down.

Writing user stories and making the domain model went very well. The group had different opinions on how to implement the design model and got stuck.

We realized making the design model will take much time and it would be good to have longer meetings for doing this.

We also realized we need to do more research on Android development.