This week I have contributed to the team's application of scrum by helping the team to break down our old "user stories" that where more like epics into smaller more defined tasks to make them more like correct user stories.

I have contributed to the team's deliveries by contributing to the UML diagram, but not as much as I would have liked. When we were going to structure it according to the MVC I was at a complete loss as how to solve it since in Android activities basically combine views and controllers into one and I contributed nothing at all to solve that problem.

So for the next week I want to read up more on the subject of how the MVC model can be applied to Android so I can help the team solve that issue.
