Individual reflection

This week I have contributed to writing user stories and with the making of the domain and design model. The user stories were improved on, mainly splitting them up and making them smaller , after getting feedback on Monday that they were to larger and most of ours would be epics.

I feel that I might not have been able to contribute as much as I wanted to in the start of the week due to it being a while since I have done domain and design modeling, but I tried to refresh my knowledge during the week and I was happy with my contribution in the end of the week.

My main lesson this week is that I need to prepare better for the upcoming weeks before they start.
